Mark Sams
PE, PND Engineers

Mark Sams is a principal engineer at PND Engineers, Inc.'s Juneau office with over 17 years of professional civil and structural engineering experience throughout Alaska. Mark has designed and managed numerous projects with both large and small clients. Mark has experience in structural, civil, and marine projects, specializing in servicing remote project sites and communities. His extensive experience includes designing all facets of buildings and marine structures utilizing a wide variety of materials. Mark appreciates working with clients from both the public and private sectors and strives to provide valuable engineering assistance with every project he is involved with.

The Anan Bay cabin and bear observatory underwent major upgrades to improve safety, accessibility, and visitor experience due to outdated and inadequate existing facilities. PND Engineers led a multi-year improvement project that included cantilevered viewing platforms, a spiral staircase, cedar shelters, and trail enhancements, all designed to minimize environmental impact. The remote location and ecological sensitivity of the site required careful logistical planning, seasonal construction windows, and novel structural solutions like rock anchors and breakaway foundations.
